

OLTD 501 - Reflection on Pecha Kucha

Visualizing how you want your future to be is one of the ways you can start setting goals. If you know where you want to go, then it is easier to walk towards it. The Pecha Kucha displays my hopes and dreams as an online educator: I want to create a safe place for my students, where they can come and share their ideas without fear. I want them to feel empowered and to help them discover their passions. Most of all, I want to grow with my students as much as they do. More than a presentation, this set of slides works as a compass to follow, and it is a good evidence for the following learning outcome: Understand, Design and Commit to Student Success in Online Learning Environments.

This outcome is perhaps the most important to me as an online educator. As a teacher, I always aim towards student success, and understand that success is very different from student to student. Being able to translate this understanding into an online environment is crucial for my development as an online educator. At the same time, being able to convey the importance of following your passions and interests to my online students will be an interesting challenge, and I look forward to being able to inspire people to believe their strengths even from miles away.
